Mrs. Jessie Lester nee June, wife of W. Frank Lester, died at the Baptist Sanitarium in Dallas at 12 o'clock Tuesday, April 5, 1910, to which place she had gone some two weeks ago for her health. It deemed soon after her arrival that an operation was necessary and she was placed in care of the most skillful physicians, who gave her the best attention known to medical science and skill, but she grew gradually weaker until the end.

Funeral services were held from the Baptist church in Canyon, Thursday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock conducted by Rev. J. M. Harder assisted by Rev. R. F. Jenkins of Amarillo, who preached the funeral sermon. The lateness of the hour selected for the services, was to let her many dear friends from Happy attend. A large concourse of friends and relatives were present, the house was overflowing. Interment at Dreamland Cemetery at Canyon.

Miss Jessie June was born at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, October, 11, 1886. Her parents G. P. June Hattie June proceeded her to the goodly land some years ago, leaving one son and one daughter to be cared for by others. These children, Jessie and Charley had the good fortune of being cared for and a good Christian home provided for them by their cousin, Miss Kuapp of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, who was present with her in her last hours of suffering and death.

Jessie and her brother Charley moved to Texas in October 1908, and located near Happy, Texas and resided there since that time.

She united in marriage with W. Frank Lester January 19th 1910 at the L. T. Lester home of this city.

She gave her life to Jesus at 12 years of age, joining the Methodist church at Mt Pleasant, Iowa, October 1898, she united with the Baptist church at Happy, Texas, February last. She passed into the home with triumphant faith.

Canyon 7, Amarillo 5.

Last Saturday afternoon the team representing the Amarillo High School was defeated in a very slow ball game by the Canyon Highs on the local school diamond, the final score standing 7 and 5 in favor of Canyon. The home team started with a rush and the first few innings the visitors did not have a look-in being unable to hit Pritchard until in the ninth with a hit and a series of errors and "bonehead" plays allowed the visitors to score three times.

Amarillo was lacking in slab artists for several men were tried but Canyon hit one as well as any other running the number of hits up into the "teens" and the man that didn't get a hit wasn't in the game. Pritchard, in the local pitcher's box, did excellent work, moving them down in one, two, three fashion while Shotwell, on third, and "Shorty" Pritchard, on short took in several hard chances. Amarillo's short stop and left fielder deserve special mention as they were the only ones on that side who played an errorless game.

Canyon will play Tulia this (Friday) afternoon on the school grounds and the boys are looking for a hot game for Tulia is coming "with blood in their eye" to revenge for the drubbing given by Canyon two weeks ago at Tulia.

A COUNTERFEIT QUARTER

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Deacon Wrenn, widower, hesitated between two women. Miss Brown, a spinster of forty, who owned a house and lot, and the widow Norman, about the same age as Miss Brown, who owned a farm.

"One day the deacon got stuck on a counterfeit quarter. The next time a tin peddler came along he offered it to the man in change.

"Don't look right, deacon."
"Oh, I guess it's all right," was the reply.

"Lots of counterfeit around."
"You needn't be afraid of that."

It wasn't a square thing to do. The deacon knew it, and the peddler knew it. The peddler pocketed the coin and went away, but he made up his mind to get even. At the next house he stopped at he was told that the deacon was hanging out between the widow and the spinster, and he thought he saw his way clear. Three days later he returned and halted on the road opposite to where the farmer was hoeing corn. The deacon came walking out to the fence to say:

"Being you accepted that quarter you'll have to keep it."

"Oh, it isn't about the quarter. I just wanted to tell you a bit of news. You know the old maid Brown in the village, don't you?"

"Seems to me I've heard of her," replied the deacon in his cautious way.

"Well, an uncle of hers in California has died and left her $15,000 cash. She's keeping it mighty quiet. She wants some one to marry her for love instead of money."

Half an hour later the deacon was hitching up to drive to the village. Two hours later he was saying to the blushing old maid:

"Sarah, I'm alone and lonely. I've concluded to take another wife. Will you have me?"

Sarah could have said "Yes" in a second, but Sarah was no spring chicken. She also weighed and balanced things. She'd said "Yes" to two different men before, but with no witnesses present, and they had left her all forlorn. Therefore she replied:

"Deacon, I respect and admire you and believe you to be a sincere man. Think of this matter on your way home and then write me a letter."

The deacon jogged home and took his pen in hand and wrote. He didn't wait for the mail, but sent his message to the village by his hired man. It was straight talk, and the written answer was "Yes."

Four days had passed when the peddler appeared again. Deacon Wrenn was out in the woodshed dyeing his whiskers. As for hair, he was so nearly baldheaded that it wouldn't pay to fool with. He suspended operations to hear the peddler say:

"Another bit of news for you, old man, and you mustn't give it away. You've heard of the Widdler Norman, mebber?"

"Yes, kinder heard."

"Got five children and never hoped to find a stepfather for 'em, but this is a world of change. It seems she had a brother in New England who hadn't been heard of in twenty years. Well, he turned up his toes the other day and left her $30,000 in cold cash. She's keeping still about it. There's a windmill man making eyes at her, but she won't let on until she knows he loves her for herself and her five sore eyed young uns. Don't breathe a hint to put him on to the dough."

The deacon promised and finished his dyeing. As he dyed he thought. He thought of the difference between $15,000 and $30,000. An early hour in the evening found him at the Widow Norman's. They talked crops and weather for awhile, and then, with her five fatherless children standing around with their mouths open, he stated that he had long and secretly admired the mother and desired to make her his wife. She wouldn't believe it at first, but his assurances finally prevailed, and she said yes. For an hour afterward the children took turns sitting on their to be stepfather's lap and pulling his dyed whiskers, and they called him "poppy" as he departed.

It has been said that Deacon Wrenn weighed and balanced things, and it may surprise the reader that he should tangle himself up with two engagements. He had figured it out that he could square things with the old maid for $1,000 or for double that at the most. This would leave him $28,000 clear, and that was a good enough bargain for any man. In a week he married the widow, and on the same day he called and offered Miss Brown a thousand big dollars. She drove him from the house in indignation. Then he learned that his wife had no brother to die and leave her even 15 cents and that no windmill man had ever wanted her. He had just charged her with conspiracy to defraud an innocent hearted man when he was served with a summons in a breach of promise suit, and when the case was finally called and tried it cost him his farm to make good the verdict. And then one day the peddler met him in the road and halted to say:

"S'more news, but don't give it away. If you can get a divorce from your wife I can locate a widder who invested in Texas oil stock when it was only 5 cents on the dollar and has held on to it until it's now selling at"—
"D— your widder and you, too!" replied the deacon as he passed on. He didn't even stop to pick up the counterfeit quarter thrown after him.

P & O Horse-Lift Cultivators

Always in Perfect Balance; the Team Does the Work.

Both gangs raised by the right hand lever, leaving the left hand free to drive the team. It is always in balance, whether the gangs are raised or lowered, and the pole will not fly up. The gangs are raised from the ground by the team; that's why it is called a "Horse-Lift" Cultivator.

This is the principle upon which it is constructed, but the perfection of this movement will be better appreciated when you realize that this Cultivator is composed of fewer parts than are used in other cultivators of this class.
